Rufus Vanderschaaf, Veteran Gateman At Ball Park, Dies

If Small Boys Could Walk Under Turnstile,
'Van' Let Them Free

Rufus Vanderschaaf, 76, veteran press gate guard at Griffith Stadium, who had his own method of determining whether youthful fans should pay, died yesterday at his home, 6115 Seventh place N.W. "Van," or "Mr. Van," as he was generally known, ruled that children who could walk under the turnstile without hitting their heads could go in free.

In some cases, however, his sympathy with the eagerness of little boys to see the game won out over his sense of precision, and he didn't always notice a decided stoop as they walked under the barrier.

"An adult couldn't put anything over on Mr. Van," his sister-in-law, Mrs. Mae Bowen, said today. "I think I was the only grown person he ever let in without paying."

Knew Many Ball Players.
When the games were nearly over at the stadium Mr. Vanderschaaf would often go inside and sit in the box of Clark Griffith, president of the Washington Baseball Club. He became acquainted with ball players on all of the American League teams, and many of them were in the habit of presenting him with little gifts.

Mr. Vanderschaaf returned three weeks ago from a trip to Florida, where he had seen Mr. Griffith. He had been in failing health since last fall and had told his friends that he hoped to be able to have just one more session at the ball park to round out 20 years as guard. He had been looking forward to the celebration of his golden wedding anniversary September 1.

His death came particularly as a shock to Edward Eynon, secretary of the baseball club. Mr. Eynon and Mr. Vanderschaaf were members of a group of ball park pinochle enthusiasts. A few days ago Mr. Eynon told Mr. Vanderschaaf "to hurry up and get well so we can finish that game."

Mr. Vanderschaaf was born in Holland, just outside of Amsterdam, and came to the United States as a boy of 15. Settling in Chicago, he attended school there, and later opened a coal and feed business.

About 45 years ago he came to Washington and for 25 years served on the metropolitan police force as a mounted policeman. His large beat in the Northeast section included most of Bladensburg road and the National Training School. When not at the ball park or playing pinochle he usually indulged in his only other hobby—listening to the radio.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Lotta Virginia Vanderschaaf; two sons, John and Phillip Vanderschaaf; two daughters, Mrs. Jessie M. Patterson and Virginia Vanderschaaf; two brothers, Oscar and William Vanderschaaf, and two sisters, Mrs. Jessie D. Young and Mrs. Anna Gray.

Funeral services will be at 2 p.m. tomorrow at the Lee funeral home, Fourth street and Massachusetts avenue N.E. Members of the metropolitan police will serve as pallbearers. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Property May Be Taken, De Valera Warns Dail

By the Associated Press.

DUBLIN, March 14.—Prime Minister Eamon de Valera, warning the Dail there would be considerable unemployment as a result of the war, hinted today that the government might take over control of private property if the supplies situation becomes worse.

"If the circumstances got so bad that such steps were needed the government might have to examine its right to direct the use of private property," he said.

De Valera added, however, that the government regarded "such interference, unless it could be proved absolutely necessary, as unwise because it creates greater problems than those which it seeks to solve."

"The greatest of calamities" that the country had to fear, he asserted, was that it would not have enough food.

Prime Minister de Valera told the Dail last night that Ireland has been in danger from the start of the war from attack by one or the other of the belligerents trying to gain military advantage and that the danger would increase.

Selectee Jailed; Went A. W. O. L. To Join Bride

By the Associated Press.

FORT DIX, N. J., March 14.—Pvt. Wilson Pershing Canfield of Newark, a member of Company K at the recruit reception center, has been sentenced to 60 days in the guard-house for being absent from the post without official leave, the Public Relations Office disclosed today.

A special court martial imposed the sentence several days ago, the office said. Canfield, recently married, was charged with having left Fort Dix to rejoin his bride.

Canfield was the selectee who went to Washington with his bride last January in a futile effort to ask President Roosevelt that he be given a belated draft deferment. Unsuccessful in this attempt, the couple returned to Newark and wrote Mrs. Roosevelt, asking her to intercede for them. Their letter went to draft authorities.

Tax Office to Stay Open Until Midnight Tomorrow

The Bureau of Internal Revenue

branch collection office at Twelfth street and Constitution avenue N.W. will be opened from 8:30 a.m. until midnight tomorrow to receive 1941 Federal income tax returns, due by midnight.

Officials in charge expect the volume of business tomorrow will far exceed the earlier volume. This week a special force of clerks and cashiers has been advising taxpayers on making returns.

More than 7,000 taxpayers visited the branch yesterday, and a larger number was expected today.

The bureau has assigned 130 clerks to help persons who bring their returns to the branch office. There are four cashiers' windows, with six cashiers alternating on the job.

The branch office provides free notarization for the returns.
